Chapter one . The storm that changed everything

On a dark, stormy night, many moons ago, the waves of the ocean were crashing loudly against rocks in the sea. The fairies of Floura were very worried if their homes and buildings would be destroyed. Everybody was in hiding under branches, flowers, trees, or any shelter because the storm was so horrible. 1 brave fairy was walking along the shore of the sea, and she found a small nature fairy. The brave fairy picked her up and carried her a long way to her home, where there was 2 other fairies. The 2 fairies who were in their home were very confused to see a nature fairy since they were all rain fairies.

"Who is this?" one of the fairies exclaimed.

"I have no idea. I found her on the side of the ocean- I think she got hit by the storm. It's pretty bad out there." Said the eldest fairy.

"I think we should take her in, she's so small, and I don't think she has a family." She said.

All the rain fairies decided to grab blankets and a spare leaf bed for the little fairy to rest on until she woke up.

Chapter two : A strange new place

Suddenly, I woke up on a leaf bed, surrounded by 3 other fairies from a different realm. My head was pounding, and I don't remember how I got to this strange place. As I looked around, it was a beautiful place; there were flowers everywhere with warm lights and beautiful tiles that ran along all of the walls.

"Oh my gosh! You're finally awake!" said the oldest-looking fairy.

"Here, eat this, it will make you feel better." She said as she stuffed a weird glitter berry into my mouth.

"What is this?" I exclaimed.

"It's a sparkleberry; they are natural healers," she explained.

I ate it because she and the other fairies towering over me looked kind and that I could trust them. Suddenly, I felt great! Better than I have before, actually.

"So like, what happened to you?" One of the fairies asked.

"I don't remember.." I said, trying to think where I last was.

"That's okay, we will take care of you now." The eldest fairy said lovingly.

Quicker than I thought, the sun rose.

"It's time to go to the market." One of the fairies said.

"Wait, but what are your guys' names? I only met you yesterday!" I said.

"Well, I'm Amber, Amber Blacklily." Said the eldest fairy. "I'm Dahlia, and she is Cleo." Said Dahlia, pointing to the quiet fairy in the back of the room.

"Okay, now let's go to the market," Said Amber.

It wasn't a very long walk to the market, but I started to realize I had no idea where I was!

Chapter three : A new adventure

When we woke up the next morning, we started packing for our adventure. We packed the necessary items, seeming as though we would be walking with big backpacks.

"And off we go!" said Amber.

We entered the enchanted forest with our backpacks on our backs, and we made sure the 4 of us stayed together. Keeping in mind, it would be so bad if we got lost. We had the book and kept looking at the very old, torn map.

"Wow, this old thing is hard to read!" I exclaimed.

"Well, duh, it's like 200 years old!" Said Dahlia.

Eventually, we got led to this old shack, the map said a witch lives there.

"I don't want to knock, Amber, you do it!" Said Dahlia.

"Fine, but if I get attacked or haunted, it's your fault," Amber said.

She loudly knocked on the witch's door, which got pushed open when she knocked.

"Why is it just open, oh my gosh?" I whispered.

I peeked in the corner, and there sat an old, wrinkled fairy who was just making potions.

"Who are you?!" The witch exclaimed.

"Um, hi, sorry, we were led to your house because our city is endangered, it says we need some sort of jewelry item to save it, and we were wondering if you could help us?" Said Amber. The old witch looked around for a minute and then paused.

"I knew you guys would be coming soon. This was supposed to happen a while ago," She said.

"What does that mean?" I said.

"Well, it happens every couple of centuries, and someone is chosen to save the city; most usually don't survive the journey, which is why it keeps happening." Said the witch.

"Well, can you help us or not?" Dahlia said impatiently.

The witch paused for a minute.

"As a matter of fact, I can." She said.

"Really?!" I said.

"Well, I don't have anything else to do." The witch said.

She then handed us a potion called Foolla from planet Floritta. It was said to be very rare, and there wasn't much of it.

"It is very fragile, please be careful with it," said the witch cautiously.

She also gave us a small, flower-shaped berry, a Pinkleberry from the land of the sweetlings.

"Deep in the forest, there is a golden bangle that needs a gem added to it to obtain the power. Once a wearer is chosen, it will glow purple and get many healing powers and peaceful powers to help this planet. Once you take it into town, everything in a mile radius that you walk near will heal." The witch explained.

"Wow, thank you." Said Amber.

"Now, continue your journey," said the witch, waving goodbye.

Chapter four: A strange cave

We traveled for days, just trying to find this bracelet. We slept in mossy climates during the long nights. Eventually, we came across a cave. This cave looked almost exactly like the one in the book we had from the library.

"I think this is it!" I said.

"It looks just like in the picture, so I suppose we should go in," Amber said.

We walked into this dark cave, and it came to an end.

"So is that it? We came all the way here just not to find it?" Dahlia said.

Cleo pointed to a small opening in the cave; a bright light shone through.

"What is that?" I exclaimed.

Amber started digging around the small hole, and the walls started to crumble down as if they weren't rock. As she was digging, the light started getting brighter and brighter.

Eventually, the opening was big enough for us all to fit through, but as we were climbing through, the light became so bright we couldn't see at all!

"Holy moly, this is bright!" Dahlia said.

We all opened our eyes to see this huge room. The walls were gems and crystals of all colors that shone so bright.

"Whoa," I exclaimed.

There was water at the bottom of the room with rocks underneath. I noticed there was this path towards the center of the room, which led to a chest.

"I think this is what we were looking for," Said Amber.

Chapter five : The bangle

"I think this is what we were looking for," Said Amber.

As we walked towards the chest, it opened with a loud creak.

"Who is there?" said a loud, deep voice.

"Hello? Who lives here? We are trying to save people!" I said.

"What do you mean?" Said the loud voice.

"We need a bracelet to save our village. Can you help us?" I said.

"I know what you are looking for, but you cannot have it. It is very sacred to this cave." The voice said.

"What can we trade ya for it?" Dahlia said.

"No amount of anything can make me want to give you this bracelet." The voice said.

"Even if it's for a good cause?" Amber said.

"I'm really sorry, but we need this! We can return it after we are done with it if it makes you happy?" She said.

As we were talking with the mysterious voice, I noticed Cleo sneak towards the open chest and quietly dig through it.

She then grabbed a gold bracelet-shaped item from the chest and walked back to where we were standing. As she was walking, the loud voice yelled.

"Hey, I saw that! Get back here now!"

We ran out of the cave, but Amber tripped on a rock and got all wet from the water. It really doesn't matter if you are wet when you're running from a mysterious creature. While we were running, trying not to trip on the rocks and gravel in the cave, the loud voice was yelling for us to get back. I boosted everybody through the cave opening, and we escaped. I sort of wish I had grabbed some of those pretty crystals from the cave; it would make a good souvenir.

"We have to keep running! It's coming!" Dahlia yelled.

After running for a while, we were really out of breath, so we found a spot to sit and hide. Cleo stuffed the shiny bracelet in her brown satchel bag, and we walked back to the village after getting food and water.

Chapter six : Healing

Once we arrived back in the village, I poured the potion into the small opening in the bracelet while standing in the village square.

"Oh my, everybody is still like hypnotized," Amber said.

"Are we sure this is a good idea?" Cleo spoke quietly.

"I hope it is," I said with reassurance.

I poured it all into the bracelet, and it started glowing a deep pink, so bright. Brighter than I've seen anything glow before.

"Whoa," We all said together.

I put the bracelet on, and it was like a wave cast upon the whole town. All the trees and plants swayed as if the wind were striking them. Suddenly, a big flash happened, and everybody took cover.

Once we started to wake up, the town was so colorful, and everybody had a lot of energy. Even the animals could tell that everything was going to be okay.

The bracelet was on the floor, so Dahlia picked it up to inspect it. Once she touched it, it vibrated with a sparkling sound, and she got a burst of energy.

"Remember, the witch said only one person could save the village? I think that's you!" Cleo said excitedly. It was almost like she was never shy.

Later that day, we donated the bracelet to the village's first aid center so they could help people in the future. Once we were walking back to our home, I looked behind me for a second and saw the old, wrinkly witch smiling at us. I waved and kept walking. Once we got in the house, I stepped in and noticed that we had just been in here a couple of days ago. It felt like such a long journey; the beds were how we made them before we left, and there was still food in the fridge.

-The end-
