Starroot

Abelore

"Magical" Wildlife

Pixie Hollow

Pixie Dust

Origin Story: My fairy created it because the plants on my planet were dying because of the weather changes so the "Magical" wildlife helped the plant survive throughout the changes. The pixie dust contributes to the creation because the dying plants caused there to be toxic dust in the air so all the fairies were getting sick and losing powers . My creation is called the Starkroot.

Appearance: It looks like a necklace with a wand pendant attached. The chain part of it is made out of sticks and it has pearls to keep it together. The pendent is a stick that is sparkly and it has a flower in the middle.

● Pixie Dust

◆ "Magical" wildlife

★ Shape shifting

When the necklace is around the fairies neck and they smell it that is when they gain the safety of keeping their powers. The pixie dust helps every fairy no matter what.

With the stick that drapes down the fairy can take it and tap whatever wildlife that they need to save. There are very few plants that it doesn't help.

For the slight chance that the powers combine it can cause the fairies to shapeshift. When they shapeshift it is really hard to go back to there normal self.

Flutterbee

Age: 12

Species: Fly quickly, change sizes, talking in persons mind without using their voice.

Chapter : 1 The Awakening

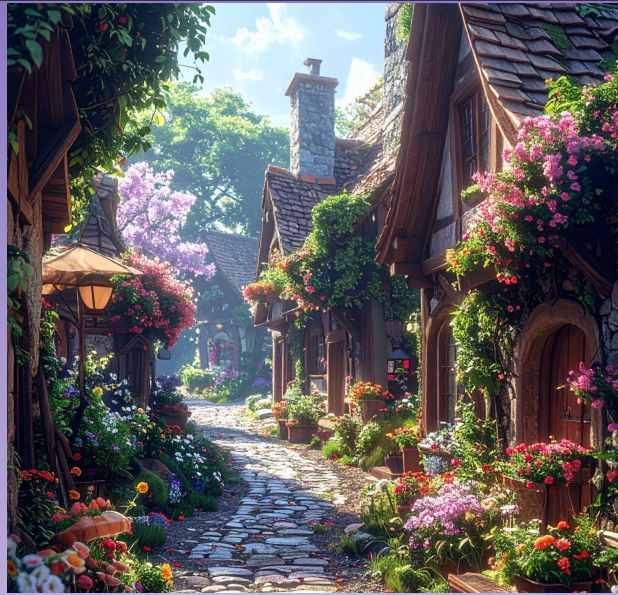

Bang! I jolted awake from the sudden noise. I reached up and rubbed my eyes with tired hands. I looked around, still trying to wake up, and noticed I was not in my bedroom. I bolted up, worried in my step. I was looking around a tiny room with one bed in the middle, a desk in the corner, a small window to my left, and a mirror on the wall next to the small door. The walls of the room were a light blue, almost like the sky. The bed frame looked like it had been made from sticks and flowers, and the same went for the small desk in the corner of the room. I thought to myself, it almost looks as if it were a fairy house?

I slowly approached the window to my left. I closed my eyes, took a deep breath, and finally looked out. I gasped in horror when I saw a small town of some sort, and as I looked closer, I saw small people, but they had things on their backs, almost like wings. That was when I heard that loud noise again. Bang! I snapped out of my thoughts, and I looked around the room again, trying to find evidence on why I was there. I walked up to the door and looked to my right, where I saw a mirror. I looked into it, and I stood there in shock. In the mirror, I saw myself, but I had a small set of wings on my back, they were sheer with a hint of purple. I needed to get out of here.

I looked at the door and questioned whether I should open it or not. I didn't know what was going to be on the other side of the door, but I was willing to find out. I placed my hand on the shiny gold doorknob and tried to turn it. As I twisted my hand right, it wouldn't turn. I tried again, and again, and finally I realized that it was locked. I searched around the room, looking for a key or anything that could open the door. I looked at the bed that I had once been sleeping in, and I lifted the covers to try and look if there was anything I was missing. I searched and searched, lifting the many blankets that were sprawled on the bed, but there was nothing. I grabbed the small throw pillow that was in the center, and I took it out of the case. That was when I saw the small silver key that was starting to rust. I ran over to the door and tried the key in the door, and to my surprise, it worked! I opened the door, but then quickly slammed it shut. I had to think of a plan. I had no idea where I was, what I was doing here, or why I had ended up in this place.

Chapter : 2 The Master Plan

I thought for what felt like ages. Finally, I came up with a plan. I approached the door and cautiously walked out. I looked around and walked down the creaky stairwell. When I got to the bottom, I saw a door that led outside. When I opened the door, I felt the hot air hit my face, but I kept walking, trying to find the closest person to ask where I was. I walked down the stone road, and finally I looked over to see a girl who looked older than me, with ginger hair, a dark purple dress, and light pink wings. I walked up and said, "Excuse me, where am I?" She looked over with wide eyes and quickly rushed me into the small alleyway between the buildings. She quickly stated, "What are you doing out here? You're supposed to be in the house still. People can't see you like this." I stared blankly at her, still processing what she said. She frowned, pulled me out from the alley, and told me to follow her.

We walked quickly into a small building called The Little Boutique. She brought me into a small room in the back and handed me a light green dress with little purple flowers on it and told me to put it on. When I stepped out, she looked at me and ushered me to a little seat where she quickly did my hair into a bun on the top of my head. She asked, "What's your name?" I opened my mouth to answer when I realized I couldn't remember. She looked at me like she could read my mind, and she assured me that it would be alright. She then said, "Until you remember, you need to answer to the name Valorie Prettypebbles." I nodded. Next, she asked, "Do you remember your age?" I thought for a second, then blurted "16!" She smiled, then she finished my hair, and we walked out of the shop and back down the road. We got to the end of the stone road, and we entered a home where she offered me tea. I said, "I'm sorry, I never caught your name." She responded with, "Misty Rosewillow."

We sat down on two little chairs with cushions and a table between us. There was a moment of silence when I finally broke it and said, "What am I doing here? And where am I?" She took a deep breath and started explaining. "We are in a place called Flouritta, and we are all mythological creatures. There is a whole universe of planets that are just like us. You are here because our leader takes people from planet Earth if she thinks they are struggling or if she has heard them say that they didn't like where they were." I sat in shock, "What do you mean 'heard them'?" She looked at me and said, "She can hear anyone that she wants from Earth." I avoided what I had just heard and asked, "What do I do? How do I get out of here?" I watched her face drop, "You don't." "I'm sorry, what? What do you mean, I don't?" She looked at me and said, "Many of us are from planet Earth and none of us can ever go back but don't worry it's a lot better than it seems." I stand there and in shock and I try to think of a plan because I know that I have to get home. I finally came up with something, "where is the Queen or whatever she is?" She looked surprised, like nobody had ever asked her that before. Misty turned and grabbed something off the shelf that was behind her. She unfolded a map and pointed to the upper left corner and said, "Here." I grabbed the map from her and quickly stood up. If that is where she is, then that's where I'm going.

Misty had given me a brown leather satchel bag with a notepad, an apple, a pen, and the map. I grabbed the map out of the bag and started my walk to the fancy castle-like building. It wasn't long before I got to the building. I walked up to the beautiful doors, where there was a man standing. I asked to speak to the Queen, and he led me inside, where there was a room at the end of the hall. I got in the room and sat in the chair that was across from a big desk. I turned around as I heard someone walk into the room. A lady sat down across from me. She had a floor-length dark blue gown with blue sparkly sequin embroidery, white wings, and dark brown hair.

We had a short conversation that included why I was there, which was almost identical to the one I had with Misty. I went to ask how I was going to leave when all of a sudden the phone rang. She picked it up and said, "How can I help you? mhh....Ok....WHAT?" She set the phone down, and she peered at me with fury in her eyes. "What was brought to this planet with you?" "What are you talking about?" Her expression changed from fury to confusion. She took a deep breath and finally said, "I just got a report that there are plants and other wildlife on my planet that are dying, which only happens when there is danger or bad energy around. This hasn't happened in over 6 years; the last report of anything like this turned into me losing almost half of the life that's here." I process everything that was being said to me, and I say, "How did I bring it here?" Queen states, "When I bring anyone to the planet, I have to open a portal in the universe, the danger must have seen the opening and snuck in with you. For all that I know, it can grow extremely fast. We have to reach out to neighboring planets where this has already happened." I watch as she grabs a booklet that has numbers and coordinates of all the surrounding planets. She then looks up from the booklet and stares at me, it's almost as if I could see the light bulb go off in her head. "Wait, you said that you want to go home, right? Well, every planet has a giant book of rules that it has to follow. In our book, it states that if I bring someone from Earth onto our planet, I can't send them back unless they do something helpful for us. If you help me, I can properly send you back if you please, without breaking any rules." I didn't even need to think before I quickly said, "Yes! I'll help in any way that I can." She smiles, and we quickly get to calling the other planets.

Chapter : 3 An Unexpected Suprise

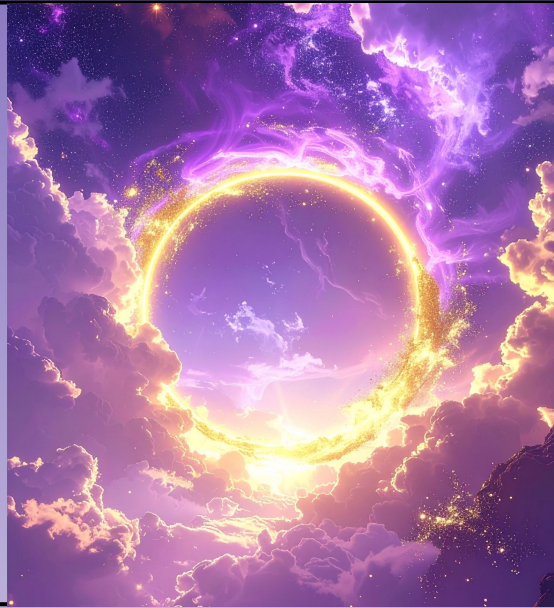

After the Queen reached out to other planets, she gave me her number so that I could call her. I started my walk back to Misty's house, which only took about 10 minutes. When I got back, Misty greeted me with a warm smile at the door. I told her everything that happened while we ate dinner. When we were done, I helped clear the table, and she led us to a room that had a small couch where we sat and talked. After talking for a little while, I was silent. I had to think of a plan to help the planet. Even though I wanted to go home, I wanted to help them because, for as long as I have been here, they have been kind to me. I decided that I needed to do research to try to learn more about the dangerous creature that is taking over planet Flouritta.

Misty led me back up to the room that I woke up in, and she gave me a change of clothes to sleep in and to change into in the morning. She led me to a bookshelf where I could try to find research books. Not long after Misty left my room to go to bed, I said, "Good night." She replied with "Good night, I'm right down the hall if you need anything." I nodded and got back to reading. After a while, I had learned a lot of new things about it. I learned that it was an evil spirit called the Nightmare, that it can affect any type of planet, and it has different effects on different planets and creatures. Some effects that it can have are during storms, the clouds will start to show your insecurities, people and creatures can start having hallucinations, people on the planets can start becoming really tired, wildlife can start dying, and many more things can start happening. I decided to try going to bed to see if I could come up with a plan to defeat this thing.

I jolt awake as I hear a buzz in my ear. I looked around to see what it was coming from. I don't see anything at first, but then I turn around and see a giant bug-like thing. As I look closer, it looks like a bumblebee with butterfly wings and a sparkly body. I jump up and run out of the room. I turn around and see that it's following me. I ran into the kitchen, where Misty was making breakfast. She looked shocked when she saw me, then her eyes got wide when she saw the bug thing following me. Her eyes relaxed as if she knew what the thing was. I was running around freaking out, which is when Misty told me. "It's your Flutterbee; she chose you. Don't be scared of her." "What do you mean she chose me?" That's when she told me to sit down. I did as she said, and she told me to look into the flutterbees eyes. When I did that, it felt like I could have a conversation with it without actually talking. It told me its name is Bluba and that she felt attached to me for some odd reason. She said that she felt the need to help me. I suddenly felt the same. "If you want to help me, please help me save this planet." Bluba smiled and nodded. "Great, I have to go change, then we can go talk to the queen again."

Chapter : 4 Special Visitors

Bluba and I quickly ate breakfast and left home to go to the queen's house. When we got there, she was already waiting for us. She let us in, and we went to the same room that I was in the previous day. I sat down, and Bluba sat next to me. She was quick to inform us about something, "When I got up this morning, I was told that something was trying to get into the universe, so I went to check my globe to see what it was. My magic globe is like a camera, but it's big enough that it can see the entire planet. The closer I looked, the more I noticed I knew those people. They were people from a fellow planet trying to get in. They must have heard the call for help." I responded with, "That's great, right?" She assured me that it was great news. "It just takes a couple of hours to get them into the universe because of the protective barriers that I had installed." I nodded and explained the new things that I had learned about the nightmare. She thanked me for taking the time to do that.

That's when I looked down at Bluba, and she started telling me something without talking. She said that she had a weird feeling that something bad was going to happen. All of a sudden, the phone rang. She cautiously picked it up and answered with, "Hello?... ok ... There's more!" She put the phone down and explained that the situation had gotten worse and that there were more sightings of the dangerous spirits. "More must have gotten in when I let the people from the other planet in! Ok, I was going to give this to you later, but now seems like a better time," As she handed me something, it looked like a necklace with a wand pendant attached. The chain part of it is made out of sticks, and it has pearls to keep it together. The pendant is a stick that is sparkly, and it has a lily flower in the middle. "What is this?" I ask. "It is a necklace called a Starroot, it helps keep fairy's power safe while helping save wildlife at the same time." I thank her, but then say, "Wait, I don't have any powers." She smiles and says, "You do, but you just haven't discovered them yet."

After talking for a while, there was a sudden knock, knock, she opened the door, and it was the people from the other plane. They came from planet Eldora. Queen said, "You're here! I was expecting you. Thank you so much for coming. I'm assuming you heard our call for help?" The people smiled and said yes, but there was one other thing that they were here for. She explained her story about trying to find her mother, who was separated from birth, but when they heard that we needed help, they thought that it was the perfect opportunity to check if she was here. We discussed many plans and ideas that we could try, but all of them were plans that would never work. One of them that we tried was we were going to attack it when we saw them but when we thought about it, we realized that they probably had a place where there were more of them hiding. Another idea we had was that we were going to attack it at night, but that is when they are awake. We realized that we needed to do a lot more planning. And we really need to find where they are hiding.

Chapter : 5 The Nightmare has arrived

As the days passed, we did our best to find out where the nightmare was hiding. The days slowly drew darker and darker. Each morning that I woke up, there would be more flowers and plants around Flouritta that had wilted into grey dust. The bright blue skies were slowly eaten by black and grey clouds, making everyone feel heavy and slowly causing people to lose hope. The air almost felt impossible to breathe in.

I stood near the window in Misty's house, staring out at the wilted plants and dark clouds. "This is getting worse; it's slowly killing people," I said softly. I looked over to see Bluba fluttering beside me. She was starting to look sickly, and her wings were not their usual bright shimmer; they were dull and sad-looking, and the medication that Misty gave her was only doing so much. She suddenly froze in mid air. "She's here," Bluba said silently into my mind.

I was about to ask her what she meant, but before I could even get a chance, there was a loud pounding noise on the front door. Misty had been standing at the end of the stairs, so she rushed to open it. The Queen rushed inside, the bottom of her dress was covered in dirt and grey ash, and it was starting to rip slightly; her hair that had once been in a beautiful curly bun was a mess on the top of her head. She urgently said, "We found where the heart of the nightmare is hiding." The Queen then said, "It was seen growing beneath the Crystal Forest." I immediately stood from the chair that I had once been sitting in, and I said, "Then we need to stop it from hurting this planet more than it already has." The Queen hesitated for a moment, then responded with, "It won't be easy, but with everyone's help, it can be done."

People from the neighboring planet arrive moments later. One of them, a girl named Macy Firethorn, stepped forward, nervously, "The nightmare feeds on fear," she explained. "If you are scared, that is going to be an advantage for the nightmare, and it will become even more powerful." I swallowed hard, trying to process what Macy had just said.

The group gathered supplies, and we had no idea how long we were going to be there. Misty insisted that she made the group some food before we all went because she wanted us to have as much energy as possible. After eating a quick meal, we all headed off to the Crystal Forest. As we walked, I looked at my surroundings, and I looked at the once-beautiful woods that had turned into a dark, gloomy forest where life was slowly dying. Black vines draped off the trees, and the crystals that had glowed bright colors were now dull. Bluba was still flying directly next to me, and I noticed the torn expression on her face that she kept trying to hide from me. In her head, I said, "Don't worry, we will fix this, and you'll never have to worry about this again." She said, "Okay."

We walked deeper into the forest, and we heard strange whispers echo through the air. "You don't belong here....", "You'll never go home....", "No one wanted you anyway...." I stopped walking, and I listened. The voices sounded real. Suddenly, the clouds above us began to swirl, forming giant images in the sky. I gasped when I recognized the images. They were all images of me from when I lived on Earth. I saw me sitting alone at lunch, being made fun of at school by the other kids, the argument at home that happened between my parents and me, and the arguments between my parents. I heard the terrible thought that I had once whispered to myself, "I wish I could disappear." The nightmare had heard me.

All of a sudden, a dark shadow burst through the ground right ahead of us. It was so tall that it towered over the forest like it was living smoke. It was these piercing purple eyes and long arms that twisted in all sorts of ways. The whole group took a step back except for me. The Nightmares' voice echoed when it suddenly said, "She belongs to me!" My hands began to shake when the starroot necklace that was wrapped around my neck started to glow a bright purple. In the distance, I heard the Queen shout to me, "Valorie, your powers! Use them," "I don't know how to," I shout back.

Suddenly, the Nightmare lunged forward. The black vines came shooting off the trees and wrapped Misty and the other up against a tree. Bluba came flying and went directly in front of my face, "You need to stop being afraid of yourself," she said in my head. As I looked down at the starroot hanging from my neck, I finally realized something. The only reason that the Nightmare had followed me was that I was carrying all of the fear and sadness that I suffered from Earth. It attaches itself to me because it gets its strength from fear. I thought to myself, I can't let those feelings control my life anymore. I closed my eyes and gripped the pendant. I felt warmth in my hands, and I opened my eyes to see a purple and yellow fog swirling around my hands. I heard the nightmare screech. I lift the starroot into the air. A bright woosh of light spreads across the forest, causing the black vines to shatter and the crystals to slowly regain their bright colors. "No! What are you doing?!" yelled the Nightmare. I yelled back, "You don't get to control me anymore!" The light grew and grew until suddenly everything went silent.

Chapter : 6 The New Beginning

I opened my eyes to see that everything had regained life and the crystals were back to their bright, vibrant colors. I looked back to see the group staring in shock. Bluba came up to me and said in my head, "You did it! You saved us!" I smiled, and I felt this rush of excitement through my body. I was free. I looked at the Queen, who was already staring at me. She gave me a reassuring nod. I looked at the others, who all then thanked me. Finally, I looked at Misty. She had tears in her eyes. She ran up to me and pulled me into a tight hug. "Thank you for saving this planet." I nodded, and when she finally let go, I looked back at the Queen. She then came up to me and said, "You helped defeat the nightmare, that means that I can send you home." I thought for a moment before I said, "What would you think about me staying?" Her eyes lit up before she gave me a knowing nod like she knew this was going to be the outcome.

It is now a year later, and I live with Misty. I met many other fairies, and I have an extremely loving family. I would not want it any other way. The day of the fight is when I realized that I just needed to let go of the things that were causing pain in my life, and I had to surround myself with people who actually care and want my life to be better. Little did I know that the fight would just be the start of my new beginning.
