

CERTIFIED DREAMVALE

BELIEVE IN THE MAGIC WITHIN YOU

THE FAIRY'S SECRET

SOME DOORS AREN'T LOCKED.
THEY'RE WAITING.

A Dreamvale Story by: Laura Schuchart

Name: Clemelle
Age: 8 Years Old
Species: Fairy
Gender: Girl
Home Planet: Abelore

Personality Traits

- Kind/helpful
- Trustworthy
- Shy, Quite
- Loveable
- Truthful
- Empathetic

Abilities

- Can drop fairy dust or touch to heal other creatures.
- Can fly for a long period of time and not get tired.

Moral Alignment

Neutral-Good

Dream(s)

To heal every hurt creature.

Fear(s)

To run out of fairy powder to heal people.

Backstory: I was created by a mad scientist back on planet earth. I used to be a totally normal human, but later on I was a menace to society. I used to damage people properties and be evil. Then I met someone who changed me into a heart- warming fairing where I later teleported to planet Abelore, where a family took me in. Now, I am living my best and happiest life while healing creatures from injuries or prior things.

Abelore

Koulbug

"Magical" Wildlife

|                    |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
|--------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Coordinates (x, y) | 18,000 , 4,000                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Government Type              | Communism                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Population         | 9,000                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | Intergalactic Disposition    | Peaceful and friendly                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Terrain            | Wet, lots of nature                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Primary Race(s)              | Dusel Bunnies, Alboth Birds, creatures, etc.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Climate            | The weather is typically Warm with some rain once in a while.                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Primary Resource/ Technology | Planet Abelore exports many types of plants and trees. The plants and wildlife that gets exported is all "Magical". Every creature on the planet makes sure that each living plant or tree is casted with magic to make it keep growing and never die in any climates.                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Size               | 0.2                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Description                  | Planet Abelore is a calm and joyful space. When you arrive to the planet you will hear nothing but nature such as, birds tweeting, trees swaying in the wind, and sparkling noises as creatures pass by you. Abelore hasn't always been this magical though. About 10,000 years ago this was an abandoned planet where there was no life. After I had found out that I can carry magic with me, I changed the planet into my dreams, with creatures and nature everywhere. |
| Planetary Wildlife | A common creature that is found on planet Abelore is the Koulbug. The Koulbug is a cute bug, that nobody is scared of. They have pink and green layers to their skin, with black polka dots that help carry their magic dust powder. They have small antennas by their face to help see. |                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |

Origin Story: The Item I created was the fairy nectar. I called it fairy nectar because only fairies can carry it and it helps to heal. I made this with a friend while mixing together our magical fairy dust and healing honey to create a magical item. Fairy nectar helps 2 times more than using just one of them.

Appearance: My product is a sparkly purple and pink substance that is stored in a genie bottle that is shaped like a flower vase. When a creature or fairy is hurt, you just have them take a sip of it and they will be healed within an hour.

● Healing

Putting this mixture of healing honey and pixie dust on your skin or drinking it will help heal you from current or prior injuries or can help you heal from being teleported out to planet Abalore.

◆ Help save their powers

By drinking this, it can help save your powers. Sometimes as a creature or fairy your powers can run out but if they start to you can just drink this and it will revive them. The healing honey helps heal your powers and the pixie dust helps to re-fuel them.

★ Shape shift

In very rare occurrences this item can also help you shape shift into any other animal you want. This only happens if the fairy nectar doesn't help heal you. This is a special gift that is only given to 0.01% of people who use the fairy nectar.

Sparklepuff

Age: 2 years old

Species: Pixie-Bunny

Gender: Girl

Home Planet: Abelore

How we Met

Sparklepuff was my last addition before I went on my long mission. She was my pet bunny on planet earth but she is now even more on planet Abelore. She is a mix on a bunny and magical pixie dust that makes her very powerful.

Ability #1: Healing powers

Sparklepuff is a very caring bunny that has healing powers. She is able to heal almost everyone, except for people who don't like her. She can sense if there's a weird feeling when she is trying to heal someone. If she feels this, she won't heal them.

Ability #2: Can fly

Sparklepuff isn't just a bunny. She is a healing goddess that can also fly. When she thinks about flying, wings propel from her back as fairy wings. She can fly for however long she wants and never gets tired.

Chapter One: My dream

I'm Clemelle. I grew up on planet Earth until I was about 6 years old, with a family that didn't like me and didn't care what I did. I would sneak out late at night, destroy people's houses/properties with my friends, and be the "naughty" kid in school. The only thing that I had was my pet bunny named Sparklepuff. I would bring her everywhere, even to school, before I dropped out.

For dinner at my house, I would have nothing but chicken broth and a stale piece of toast that was 3 months expired, and yes, it did have a couple of green spots on it, but my mom always said, "Just eat it, it's extra protein".

Although I would say my past life wasn't great, I still had the bunny that kept me company. All I wanted in life was to be a better person, and instead of always having people help me with everything, I wanted to start helping other people.

I have always been in love with nature. Being outside and pretending that I'm flying in the wind like a magical fairy is all that I did. I would grab flakes of grass, flowers, and weeds while pretending that they were my magical dust powder. I wanted nothing more than to live in a home surrounded by nature with lots of animals and wildlife. The feeling of the breeze passing by you and the smell of the fresh-cut grass surrounding me was a magical feeling. I loved walking to my neighborhood park with my bunny while jumping off the playset with my magical fairy wings on. On a Tuesday night, all of my dreams came true, and my life changed forever.

Chapter Two : A Blast From the Past

Out of the blue, on a Tuesday, mid afternoon, I heard our house phone ring. I wasn't able to get my own phone because my mom said I was too irresponsible, which I don't even know what that means. Anyway, I picked up our house phone and heard a familiar voice.

I asked what their name was, and they responded with, "Do you not remember me"? "I'm Miss Lucia, your 1st-grade teacher, you know, before you dropped out".

I was so confused about why she was calling me and how she got my phone number. I quickly ran to my bedroom to find our yearbook from that year to try to remember what she looked like. She was a tall, blonde woman in her 40s. I felt a random sigh of relief when I remembered who she was.

I thought she was calling to get me away from my family, or maybe even move out of this dumpster hole town I live in. Turns out she was just checking in on me because she heard that I had a dream of being connected with nature.

All of a sudden, her voice deepened and grew stern. She said, "I have a special offer for you if you want to be a better version of yourself."

I responded with "Really?"

Miss Lucia told me to meet her at her house that night to help me leave my home. As I heard her say those words, my heart dropped, but I knew that I had to go and do what's right for me. So once I hung up the phone, I packed everything that I thought I would need to spend my life somewhere else. I packed clothes, a toothbrush, my mom's flip phone, just in case anything happened, and of course, my pet bunny, Sparklepuff.

I walked all night to her house, taking over 2 hours. Upon arrival, I saw her huge house in the middle of the woods with as much wildlife as you could imagine, or so I thought.

She had a four-car garage with so many windows on the outside. I went up to her front door, which was 2 beautiful French doors, and rang her doorbell. She greeted me very warmly with a big hug and a nice cup of hot chocolate topped with gooey, fluffy marshmallows. Just walking into her house was a dream.

She led me into a room with a big, blue, bubble-like thing on a stand. I was a bit hesitant even walking near it, but I worked up the courage and asked her what this was for. Miss Lucia explained that one of her close friends lives on a planet called Abelore and mentioned that all of the wildlife is getting sick and dying because of a nightmare that is spreading. She said she needs someone to live there who has a passion for nature and wildlife, as well as helping. She said that I would be the perfect person to do this.

Chapter Three: The Nightmare Begins

I was overwhelmed by how artistic and colorful Miss Lucia's house was. She gave me a tour, showing me her 10-bedroom house, where only she and her 3 cats live. She brought me back into the room with the big blue bubble and told me to tighten my backpack around me.

She said to step into the bubble if I wanted to change planet Abelore for the better. Before I had stepped in, I asked why she wasn't the one going to help with the nightmare.

She responded, "I have too much going on here, back on planet Earth, and I know you have a heart for wildlife."

I had so many thoughts racing through my head at this point, like, Will I survive? Can I ever come back to earth? Will my family even notice I am gone? How will I need to adjust to fit in on planet Abelore?

As my adrenaline raced, I stepped into the big blue bubble and immediately felt an aura of coldness and wind rushing through me. My hair was blown through the vast drift of wind, and I suddenly felt my feet lift off the floor. I looked outside the bubble, and I saw Miss Lucia waving bye to me. I lifted all the way, and all of a sudden I was off! I flew up through a tube, going up, down, left, and right while bumping into the walls of the tube.

Miss Lucia had said that this ride would only take about half an hour. I started to get knots in my stomach because I didn't know where I would end up from here. Finally, I saw the light of the planet at the end of the tunnel. The full wind pushed me right out of the tube. I landed flat on my butt, looking down.

As I lifted my head to see what I got myself into, I saw the most beautiful sight I have ever seen, with bunnies running around with flies and magical bugs buzzing by me.

I felt something land on me, and I saw a butterfly that landed on my nose. And right in front of me, it turned into a fairy. She introduced herself as Sela. She said that she was waiting for me to arrive. She had explained how the nightmare is making the wildlife turn evil and is making all of the plants and trees die. She said she is starting to trust nobody and said she is hoping she can trust me.

We made a plan on how we will get rid of the nightmare. Sela showed me a map of where the nightmare is hitting, and I realized that it's not just planet Abelore being hit by it; it's everywhere. This nightmare is traveling at the speed of light! She explained that it is very dangerous to even come near it, but we knew we had to do something.

Chapter Four : Our Great Plan

Sela invited me to her home, and I accepted the invitation. I walked to her home and stepped in as a breeze of cotton candy-smelling air that drafted towards me. I walked past a huge mirror, but noticed something was off.

I glanced fully into the mirror and noticed that I had turned into a fairy. Sela explained that the moment you set foot onto planet Abalore, it gives you a very important role; mine was a fairy.

She brought me to a purple glowing table and told me to lay my hands on it to find out what my fairy powers were. Every fairy on that planet gets different powers and different looks. All of a sudden, Sela gasped. I jumped because of fear as she said I have very rare powers. I have powers to heal people, which she said she had never even heard of before. She said that it would be a great help to defeat the nightmare.

Sela and I began to finalize our plan to get rid of the nightmare. We plan to save all of the other planets first by using my healing powers and my fairy nectar, which is a liquid we will spill on all other planets, that will help to shrink the nightmare back down, and once it is only on our planet, we will use Sela's powers by striking it with her pixie wand, which is meant to tame angry creatures or spirits. This plan sounded good in our heads, but might be a little crazy to say out loud. We weren't sure how to even go about this, but we chose to go with this plan.

That night, we made sure to get a good night's rest back at Sela's house. Obviously, I had never slept on a planet with fairies, but I was quite surprised by how comfortable the beds were. They looked like little cocoons that butterflies would go in. They had stripes with a comfy green blanket to cover up with.

We planned to wake up early in the morning to get ready and set off during the day while the nightmare is asleep. We didn't want the nightmare to see what we were doing, and spread it even more. Sela and I were first planning on going during the night so nobody would know we were leaving planet Abalore, but we soon realised that we couldn't because the nightmare would be awake.

The next morning, we woke up from our sleep and packed up a bag with enough fairy nectar and, of course, my pet bunny sparklepuff, who had changed into a pixie-bunny overnight, because I can't go anywhere without her.

Chapter Five : The Attack

Back

A little bit before we took off on our mission. Sela had to teach me how to fly with my fairy wings. I was very confused about how I would fly, but she said that it just kind of comes to you like it's natural. She explained it like walking; if your mind and body tell you to walk, your legs will move. All I had to do was think about flying, and there I was lifting up into the sky.

Sela and I had no idea what we were actually getting ourselves into. As we entered the universe, we noticed that the nightmare had spread to almost twice the size as the last time we checked. We couldn't just give up and not try, so we went in with all of our forces. I flew above many planets, like planet Zari and planet Floura, while dropping my fairy nectar on top to try and heal the nightmare. I had so many thoughts swirling in my head. I turned left and right many times to cover all of every planet.

All of a sudden, I looked back and didn't see Sela anymore. I knew I couldn't start to worry or panic, because then I would rethink everything that I am doing. I carried on dropping pixie dust while seeing the nightmare shrinking. I looked down at my hand and noticed that my never-ending pixie dust was coming to an end. It was running out! Of course, this was never supposed to happen, but I knew I had to work something out.

I couldn't scream for Sela to get me more pixie dust because I knew the nightmare would wake up. It was only a matter of time before the pixie dust would wear off if it wasn't on every square inch of these planets. I was just sitting there, floating in the universe, deep in thought, as I heard wings flapping in the background.

I turned around, and it was Sela flying with Sparklepuf, heading right toward me. Sela explained that since I am capable of making pixie dust, so is my bunny companion. Right as I found that out, I took my bunny into my arms and started flying around, dropping the pixie nectar on all of the infected planets. I then got to where the origin of the nightmare started, and I knew I needed some reinforcements. So I told Sela that she needed to use her powers on the origin of the nightmare at the same time as I do, and that will destroy it.

We kept dropping our magic on this big, lively creature, but it wasn't working. It was almost like we missed a spot of the spreading nightmare. Before I could even think, Sparklepuf flew out of my arms like he was in a rush. Sela and I followed him and tried to keep up the best that we could. We weren't quite sure what direction he was leading us to, but I knew we needed to follow him. I figured that he had just sensed something was a little off, or that I had missed a little spot of a planet.

Chapter Five : The Attack Back

But as I could barely speak a word, I turned to see a big purple monstrous tornado-looking thing that was engulfing Planet Abalore.

The planet that I came to this universe to save! I couldn't believe it. It was like my life flashed before my eyes. Before I could even process it, I dove down while flying with the wind as Sparklepuff and Sela followed. We all worked together, dropping our fairy nectar, pixie dust, and other powers down to help heal the nightmare. I finally had a relief in my breath as I looked down at the nightmare-free planet that took hours to complete.

I went over to Sela to give her a big hug because I had thought we had accomplished it. Sela then refused a hug because we weren't done yet. We still had to destroy the nightmare origin. We headed on over there just to realise the nightmare was completely gone! We were so confused by how this would have happened. In the corner of my eye, I saw something that was flying, headed right toward me.

As I heard her voice yell “Hi,” I knew I recognized it. It was Miss. Lucia! She teleported from her home to come help us destroy the nightmare. Before I had even agreed on teleporting to save Planet Abalore, she said she was too busy.

But she mentioned that all along, she knew she was going to come help. Sela, Sparklepuff, Miss. Lucia and I all headed back to Planet Abalore to celebrate our victories toward the nightmare.

Chapter Six : My New Home

Our whole gang was back on planet Abelroe. Sela offered us some fairy tea that helps restore our energy. We all sat down at the dining table in Sela's house. As I was just about to rant on about how that was the scariest thing in my life, and it was crazy that we defeated it, Miss Lucia had something to say.

She started her speech by saying how proud of me she was. I was a little confused because in the first couple of sentences, she didn't mention anything about Sela. She went on rambling about how she knew she would come to Planet Abelore to celebrate. She said there was just one last thing that she forgot to mention. She said that this was all just a test. I stopped in my tracks with my jaw on the floor. She explained that to live on any other planet than Earth, you have to be "Qualified". She said that she set this whole thing up for me. She said that she ended up running Planet Abelore and even had to do these tests on Sela. Sela was behind all of this, too. Miss Lucia asked an old friend to create a big purple nightmare and try to make it hard to defeat.

Upon hearing her say that, I was flabbergasted but also thankful I got to go through this experience. Miss Lucia had never talked about even ever going to Planet Abelore, so when I heard her say she ran it, I was a little bit confused. Later on, Miss Lucia said that I had officially qualified or passed the test and that I was eligible to live on planet Abelore now.

I had put my whole old life behind me, and this was now my new and improved life. She said that I did better than most people would during this test. Just these words coming out of her mouth made my life sound so unreal. I talked to Miss Lucia, and we figured a few things out. For example, she was going to go home and tell my parents for me that I decided to live on Planet Abelore, and that she was going to figure out a place for me to stay on Planet Abelore, and maybe in the future take her spot as being the leader.

Since Sela had known about all of this happening, she didn't really have anything to say at the end except good job to me. She had mentioned how excited she is to live on the same planet as me and that she's looking forward to tricking a bunch of other people into destroying the nightmare to live on planet Abelore. Later on, I finally got a place to stay on my new planet, and Sela and I are now officially best friends.

Sadly, I had to say my goodbyes to Miss Lucia, but I definitely had a good amount of appreciation in that goodbye.

Just like she would say in first grade, "Toodles, see you whenever I see you again". And just like that, my first mission was over, but there's still plenty more to come.